Introduction:

Environmental changes and health is one of the most urgent challenges for the international society. With the rapid urbanisation process, the changes in the living environment, social organisation, family relations, housing conditions, transportation choices, dietary patterns, access to education and healthcare services, and the transmission of infectious disease agents affect people's everyday life. These changes are going to further exacerbate and add new environmental and health impacts on population, especially the vulnerable groups, which brings challenges but also opportunities for people's quality of life.

The purpose of the pre-conference is to bring together both international and Chinese researchers from the natural, social and health sciences to exchange ideas on the theme of "Shaping Geographies of Health, Health Care and Environment".

The main themes will be: (1) Geography of Health and Environmental Change, focused on the links among global change, health and environment in a globalizing world; (2) Health Care, focused on the analysis of quality of life with an emphasis on health, health care, and the environment at various geographic scales.

This conference would identify and discuss the state of knowledge on environmental health, development and vulnerability and on sustainable health care systems from a broad public health perspective but also include the medical performance, the environmental stresses, the demographic changes including population ageing, the socio-economic conditions and economic capability of health care systems.

About Xi'an City

(http://english.snnu.edu.cn/about.php?cat_id=1255):

Xi'an is one of the oldest cities in China, with a history of more than 3,100 years. Called Chang'an before the Ming Dynasty, Xi'an is one of the birthplaces of the ancient civilization in the Yellow River Basin area of the country. Xi'an used to be the capital city of 11 dynasties such as Western Zhou (11th century BC - 771 BC), Qin (221 BC - 206 BC), Western Han (206 BC - 24 AD) and Tang (618 - 907). Xi'an is also the eastern terminus of the Silk Road and home to the Terracotta Warriors.

Terra Cotta Warriors and Horses

The Museum of Terra Cotta Warriors and Horses is praised as 'the eighth major miracle of the world', the Mausoleum of Emperor Qin Shi Huang is listed on the World Heritage List, and the City Wall of the Ming Dynasty (1368 - 1644) is the largest and most intact Ming Dynasty castle in the world. In the city, there is the 3,000 year old Banpo Village Remains from the Neolithic Age (approximately from 8000 BC to 5000 BC), and the Forest of Stone Steles that holds 3,000 stone steles of different periods from the Han Dynasty to the Qing Dynasty. The natural landscape around Xian is also marvelous. Mt. Huashan, one of the five best-known mountains in China, is famous for its breath-taking cliffs and its unique characteristics.

Arriving in Xi'an by airline and train:

By Airline

Xi'an's airport is located 50 km (about 31 miles) northwest of downtown Xi'an in Xianyang, a neighboring city. Ranked as the fourth most frequented airport in China, Xianyang International Airport (XIY) is home to 68 domestic daily flights from almost every major Chinese destination. International airlines from 10 Asian cities such as Japan, Korea, Malaysia, Singapore and Thailand have well-established services with XIY. In 2005, there opened 7 new international airline routes from Germany, France, Britain, America and Canada via transfers in Beijing. In 2006, other 8 international airline routes from Europe, America and Asia are opening via transfers in Shanghai.

There are shuttle buses between the airport and the urban area with a 25 Yuan admission fee per person. Alternatively, at a price of RMB 100-120 Yuan the journey can be made by taxi.

By Train

Xi'an Railway Station is one of the most pivotal terminals of the domestic railway system. It is the key junction between the southwest and the northwest, and forms a connecting link between the east and the west of China. The high speed train takes around 5 to 6 hours from Beijing to Xi'an.

The station lies in the north urban area of Xi'an, so it will take you about half an hour by car from the downtown area.
